NEED SOME MIDWEEK INSPIRATION?

Look no further than our social media! This summer, Offroute's Social Media Fellow, Maeve Cunningham, has been researching incredible artists and featuring their work, as well as a mini history lesson, every Wednesday. Here is a sample from this past week's Art Inspiration featuring Hilma af Klint.

"The Paintings for the Temple" was made up of 193 paintings between 1906 and 1915 and explored creation, evolution, and the universe. Hilma instructed that these pieces not be shown until 20 years after her death. Those paintings, among her other works, was later turned into an exhibition at the Guggenheim Museum--securing her legacy as a pioneer of abstract art.

DAISY'S TUTORING CLUB

Offroute Art Liaison, Daisy Sosa, recently launched Daisy's Tutoring Club, an affordable collective of college students who can provide quality, virtual tutoring. They offer Spanish, Biology, English, Art, College Prep, math, and more, all at $15 per hour. We are so excited for Daisy's venture and hope you will help us spreading the word. Check out her website for more information: daisystutoringclub.com
